Watch “Ken in Cannes” Video Blog

May 15, 2007 (CANNES) — Filmmaker Ken Feinberg is attending the Cannes Film Festival and wants everyone to share his experience. Feinberg is premiering two short films at Cannes (Seven Generations and Hearts and Souls) and is also producing short films about his adventure in the form of a daily video blog, which will air at www.myspace.com/kenfeinbergfilms.

“As a filmmaker, of course, my instinct is to capture the experience on film, and with today’s technology, I thought it would be fun to send little video postcards to my friends and family at home,” he said.

Using myspace.com as his portal, that audience could be quite a bit bigger than the supportive contingent of fans Feinberg has gathered in Atlanta, New York, and Los Angeles as an actor, writer, and director for 18 years.

“Sure, I’d love to show the world what I’m doing at Cannes,” he said, adding that his intention at Cannes is to “get a three-picture deal” with a major production studio to finance his feature film projects. Feinberg’s two shorts will screen as part of the Short Film Corner market at the Cannes Film Festival. Both films were written and directed by Feinberg, who has appeared on television as an actor in shows such as Buffy the Vampire Slayer, The District, Alias, and Star Trek Enterprise.

The video blog will run from May 16 - May 27.
